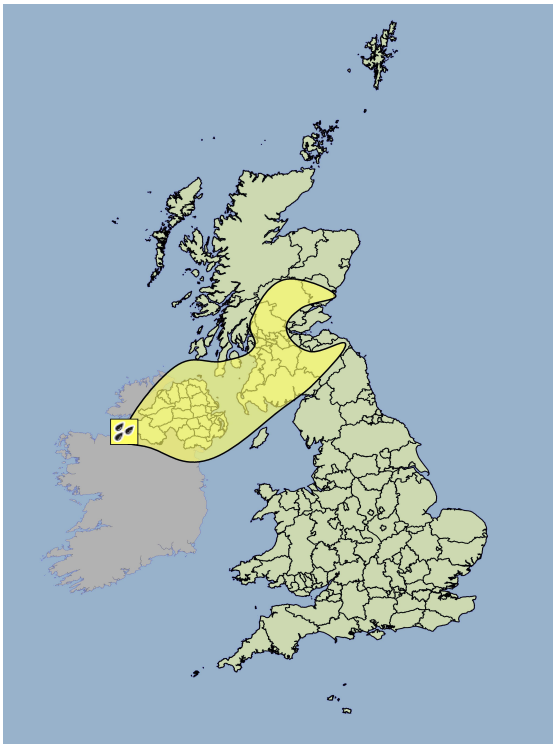
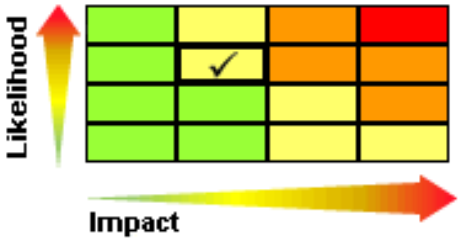
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A deep area of low pressure which is moving northeast across northwest Scotland is continuing to bring some wet and very windy weather to parts of the UK. As the low pressure moves away northeastwards later today, the rain should gradually ease and turn more showery from the southwest.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:05 on Fri, 27th Dec 2013 until 23:55 on Fri, 27th Dec 2013

Further spells of heavy rain will affect parts of Scotland and Northern Ireland for the rest of today. A further 10 to 20 mm will occur in places, with locally 30 mm over high ground of Scotland. The rain should gradually ease from the southwest through the rest of today.

The public should be aware of the potential for disruption, especially where ground is already saturated and high winds are combined with heavy rainfall. This warning has been updated to remove Wales and southern England where further showers today are unlikely to be disruptive.
